Pre-Game Huddle: Your Focus for Lesson 3

Welcome to Lesson 3. This is where the M.V.P. Blueprint moves from a strategic document to a tactical, executable plan. Your Athleader is building their first 90-Day Plan to translate their purpose into focused action.

Your role is to be their crucial Alignment check, ensuring their plan is both ambitious and achievable. You will also model the focus you expect by building your own plan.

This week's A.R.A.W. focus:

Agility | Alignment | Resilience

Your Objectives for this Lesson:

- Draft your own tactical 90-Day Leadership Plan to model focus and clarity.
- Learn how to introduce the 90-Day Way framework as a team alignment tool.
- Prepare to coach your team through the inevitable roadblocks and skepticism that come with any new plan.

Did You Know?

Research on New Year's resolutions suggests 92% of people never achieve their goals. The difference isn't the goal itself, but having a system to execute consistently. The 90-Day Way is that system.

Source: University of Scranton research, as reported in Psychology Today, "92 Percent of People Never Achieve Their Goals" (December 2024).

LEAD SELF: Your 90-Day Game Plan

You cannot lead a team with a clear game plan if you haven't defined one for yourself. This drill moves you from theory to action, forcing you to gain clarity on your leadership priorities for the coming quarter. Use this template to architect your focus.

Complete the template below. Start by anchoring your goal in your M.V.P. statement from Lesson 2.

Step 1

M.V.P. Anchor

Review your M.V.P. from Drill 2.2. How does this goal serve your Purpose, Vision, or Mission?

Step 2

My #1 Leadership Goal for the Next 90 Days

What is the single most important leadership behavior or outcome you want to achieve? Be specific: about how you lead, measurable, with a start date.

Step 3

A.R.A.W. Pillar Under Pressure

Which Core 4 pillar will this goal test the most? This helps you anticipate where you'll need to focus your energy.

- ◯ Agility — Requires adapting to new information or changing priorities.
- ◯ Resilience — Requires bouncing back from a setback or managing stress.
- ◯ Alignment — Requires getting buy-in from others or connecting to a larger strategy.
- ◯ Wellbeing — Requires managing your energy, prioritizing recovery, and preventing burnout.

Step 4

The #1 Anticipated Roadblock

What is the biggest obstacle, internal or external, that could derail this goal?

Step 5

My Proactive Reframe Plan

How will you proactively address this roadblock? What powerful question can you ask yourself to reframe it as an opportunity?

- ☐ I added this goal to my 90-Day Way Scorecard.
- ☐ I'll share it with my Athleader in this week's check-in.

LEAD OTHERS: Introducing the 90-Day Way

Your play is to introduce the 90-Day Way framework to your team, not as another initiative, but as a tool to build shared focus and reduce noise. This drill helps you prepare your talking points for maximum impact.

Plan your talking points for your next team meeting using the playbook below.

Step 1

The "Why" (Your Benefit Statement)

How will you explain the benefit of this framework to the team? Frame it as a solution to a shared pain point.

Your "Why" Statement

Example

"To help us cut through the noise of competing priorities and protect our focus, we're going to try a simple framework called the 90-Day Way. This is a tool to help us clarify what truly matters this quarter so we can make a real impact and feel less stretched."

Step 2

The Facilitation Question

What is the one powerful, open-ended question you will ask to start the conversation about a shared 90-day goal?

Your Facilitation Question

Example

"Looking at our key priorities, what is the one thing that, if we achieve it this quarter, will make the biggest difference for our customers and the business?"

In the video, Melissa's question is: "What is the one thing we must achieve this quarter to be successful?" Then open every weekly check-in with the answer.

Our shared goal:

LEAD OTHERS: Coaching Through Skepticism and Roadblocks

Your role as a Player-Coach is to build your team's Resilience by helping them anticipate and reframe obstacles. This drill prepares you for two common challenges: skepticism and roadblocks.

Part 1: Coaching Through Skepticism

You introduce the 90-Day Way, and a team member expresses skepticism, seeing it as "just another corporate initiative that will fade." How do you address their concern and build buy-in? Hint: connect it to a pain point they are feeling, like meeting overload or unclear priorities.

Your Response Plan

Part 2: The Roadblock Reframe

Anticipate a potential roadblock for your team's new 90-day goal and prepare a powerful coaching question to spark creative problem-solving instead of defeat.

Anticipated Roadblock

e.g., a budget cut, a shifting deadline, a key dependency is delayed.

Your Powerful Question

This question should shift the team from "we can't" to "how could we?"

Example

"This is a tough constraint. What new possibilities or creative solutions does this force us to consider?"

Locker Room Reflection

Challenge: A new, urgent corporate priority drops in the middle of your team's 90-day plan. How do you use the 90-Day Way framework to help your team adapt with Agility, reassess priorities without losing momentum, and manage their Wellbeing to prevent burnout?

This reflection goes with the real-world challenge from Video 3.4.

"Align your focus, act with intention, and watch results compound. That's the 90-Day Way in action."

My notes:

Get Feedback
